ANOTHER BREATHITT CO. FEUD CASE BEFORE COURT

B. Fulton French, Said To Be Slayer Of Thirty
Men, On Second Trial For Murder
Of James B. Marcum.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beattyville, Ky., June 17.—A special term of the Lee circuit court convened here today for the second trial of B. Fulton French, one of the Breathitt county feud leaders charged with the assassination of James B. Marcum. The assassination of Marcum occurred May 4, 1903. He was killed as he stood at the courthouse door in Jackson. Judge James Hargis, the Breathitt county feud leader, and Sheriff Ed Callahan of the same county were accused of employing Curt Jett and Tom White to do the killing. Jett was sentenced to hang and White was given a life term in the penitentiary. A year ago Jett confessed, saying he had killed Marcum at the behest of Hargis and Callahan. He said White had nothing to do with it. Later, however, Jett was put on the witness stand, and he then repudiated in full his confession, saying he had been forced to make it by the attorneys for the prosecution. Judge Hargis and Callahan were acquitted, while Mrs. Marcum, widow of the murdered man, swore vengeance. Later Curt Jett was given a life sentence for the assassination of James Cockrill, and upon a reversal of his death sentence for killing Marcum was given a life sentence for that murder also.

Fulton French, John Smith and John Abner were charged with complicity in the assassination of Marcum, and tried here last summer on a charge of venue from Breathitt county. The jury stood eight for hanging and four for acquittal. They could not agree and were discharged. French, the man who is now to be tried the second time, is the former leader of his faction in the French-Eversole feud war in Perry county, in which nearly one hundred men were killed. French is said to be personally responsible for the deaths of more than thirty of these men. He is now a lawyer and lives at Winchester with his family.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, June 17, 1867.—Broke His Finger.—Mr. C. A. Koeler broke the fore finger of his right hand while playing ball on Friday last.

Over two hundred dollars was raised by the Baptist Society yesterday for the Home Missionary Society and to carry on their denominational work.

Rescinded.—We understand that our Young Men's Association passed a resolution of censure on Theodore Tilton not long ago, in consequence for his unreasonable charges for expenses while lecturing here. At a recent meeting the resolution of censure was rescinded by a large majority.

Slightly Mistaken.—We were under the impression that the order of the council was for the removal of those unsightly structures on the river bank, but we conclude it was only a permission to number them. This work has been only performed by some enterprising individual. Any one who may have been overlooked may hand in their name and the number they wish to the council.

Entirely Wrong.—People living upon one of the pleasantest streets of the city were compelled to witness a game of baseball yesterday. This game we had always supposed to be very bewitching, but did not suppose that the young men who ought to have some regard for other's feelings, as well as respect for themselves, would be so carried away with its witchery as to desecrate the Sabbath to satisfy their anxiety to perfect themselves in that noble game. The City Marshal ought to remind those young gentlemen that some other day would be quite as appropriate, or give them an almanac to read. Young men, make a home run and stay there one day of the week.

THINGS WE DO NOT SEE.

Proof That the Majority of People Are Unobservant.

A man who had recently been in Europe, was entertaining his friends with stories about Paris, and in the course of his talk mentioned several places which were unknown to his listeners, although they had all frequently visited the French capital. "People go through the world with their eyes shut," was the story teller's comment. A quiet little man in the party then said that even the most observing people did not always see, and, addressing the traveler, said: "You have read the same paper daily for 30 years. Do you know how many columns it has on a page?" "No." "You look at your watch many times every day. Can you tell me, is the six on its face a Roman or an Arabic figure?" "Why, Roman, of course." And he looked, and found that there was no "six" on his watch dial. "All of which demonstrates," said the little man, "that the most observing do not always see."

NEW YORK CAR BARN BURN.

Thirty Electric Automobiles and Company's Books Destroyed.

New York, June 17.—Fire Sunday afternoon destroyed the car barns of the New York City Railway company, situated in Madison avenue, between Fifty-fifth and Eighty-sixth streets. A number of nearby residences were damaged. The loss will exceed $20,000.

Thirty electric automobiles and several cars which were in the building were destroyed. Two large safes which contained $3,700 are believed to be intact, but the books and records of the company were lost. Several firemen were badly bruised by the falling walls.

REWARDED FOR SPANKING GIRLS

Iowa School Principal Punishes Pupils and Gets More Pay.

Bristow, Ia., June 17.—Prof. D. H. Correll, president of Bristow schools, was brought into court on a charge of assault and battery. The charges were filed by girl students at the school who testified that the teacher made a practice of spanking them. The teacher's defense was that the girls were naughty and that spankings were necessary to maintain discipline. He was acquitted and the school board immediately increased his salary.

"Sleeper" Webster Is Dead.

Kansas City, Mo., June 17.—Thomas C. Webster, aged 60 years, of Horse Shoe Bend, Idaho, who began to sleep on a train between Kansas City and Denver on April 1 and who did not open his eyes thereafter for 77 days, died at the General hospital here Sunday. A committee of doctors who examined Webster said his sleep was feigned. He was suffering from acute melancholia.

Shoots Sister; May Be Lynched.

St. Joseph, Mo., June 17.—Two hundred armed farmers engaged in a futile man hunt near Faucet, ten miles south of here, intent on lynching David Linn, alias "Bud" Linn, for shooting and mortally wounding his sister, Mrs. Mollie Seymour, at her home near Faucet.

Drowned in Lake Minnetonka.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 17.—John Abstrom, of Minnetonka, was drowned Sunday afternoon at Lake Minnetonka. A sudden windstorm Sunday evening overturned a score of "Tonka" boats, but no deaths are reported.

THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

Rock county is to be congratulated on the initial movement recently inaugurated for good roads. While the appropriation is small and only a limited number of towns will participate, enough will be accomplished to demonstrate what can be done under intelligent and practical supervision.

The few people who had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Lancaster when here last Saturday, were impressed with the notion that he was not only enthusiastic in his work but thoroughly familiar with every detail.

He is a constructing engineer in government employ and any state or county is fortunate in securing his services. The work of road-building he thoroughly understands, not from a theoretical standpoint, but from actual experience in the field.

His home county in Tennessee, with a population of 42,000 and a property valuation assessed at only $6,000,000, became interested in good roads and voted a 30-year bond issue of $300,000 to commence the work.

Mr. Lancaster was employed and five miles of good roads was built on all the thoroughfares entering the county seat town. A force of 300 men and 125 teams, under Mr. Lancaster's direction, performed the work, and when it was completed the people were so much pleased that they immediately voted another bond issue of $200,000 and the work still goes on.

Farmland advanced in price from $15 to $35 and $50 per acre, and this has all occurred within the past three years. The material used on these roads was shipped by rail 130 miles, and this, of course, added largely to the cost.

The people of Tennessee were driven to the movement in self-defense, for they found it impossible to keep young people on the farm, hemmed in by impassable roads. This is true, not only of the southern state, but of every other state.

There is nothing which adds to the value and attractiveness of the farm so much as good roads, and there is no county in the west so well equipped with natural resources for road-building, as Rock county.

Mr. Lancaster rode over portions of the county last Friday, and he said, "This magnificent country is certainly entitled to good roads."

The plan to build a few miles of modern roads this year is a start in the right direction, and will prove a valuable object-lesson providing the work is intelligently done.

The most important thing to do is to secure the services of a competent engineer, either from the government or state, to lay out the work, establish the grades, and advise as to the material to be used.

It has been suggested that the towns interested get together and let the entire work to one or two responsible contractors. This would insure the use of crushers, rollers, and other machinery, which many towns do not own, and it would also result in having the work well done.

The suggestion is a good one, and worthy of careful consideration.

Every town in the county should build at least one mile of good roads next year. When this start is made, it will not be long before a demand will be created for good roads throughout the county, and in less than ten years the entire district may be covered at trifling expense compared to the many advantages which will result.

GOOD FOR SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco is to be congratulated on the conviction of Mayor Schmitz on the charge of extortion and bribery. San Francisco has suffered much in the past two or three years from strikes, earthquakes, fire and municipal corruption. The break-up of the Ruef-Schmitz corrupt ring, the conviction of Schmitz and the confession of Ruef are the first clearing of the skies.

It appears that it was a matter of a hundred dollars or the man's life and the hundred dollars won. The man died. This is charity in its broadest sense. Charity that the taxpayers pay for. Charity that begins at home. Yet the county continues to endorse such action.

Fourth of July comes once a year and it should be duly celebrated. The gentlemen passing the subscription papers will not miss you if they can help it, but if they do step up and make your donation.

The good roads movement is now under way. The start of a gigantic undertaking begun and the end will mean prosperity to the whole county.

Taft still has the call. He gains friends day by day and his inspection tour of the army post is really a march of triumph through the country.

Taft is not half as big as his pictures make him look, but he is big enough to sit in the presidential chair with honor if Roosevelt does not want it.

The talk is still of the Fourth of July. Interest in this subject does not flag despite the fact the temperature rises.

Milwaukee is after an immense Y. M. C. A. building. It is a good move in the right direction and should meet with ready support.

The legislature is nearly at the last lap. It is to be hoped they will decide matters to suit themselves before adjourning.

Manufactured sentiment is not always as lasting as the genuine thing.

GOLFERS TO TRY FOR A SERIES OF PRIZES

Three Monthly Contests Are to Be Held for Members of the Mississippi Golf Club.

Aside from the regular club contests for the different medals the board of directors have decided to offer three series of prizes, one for June, one series for July, and one series for August, for the four best net scores to be handed in during these months. All active club members can compete in the contest, but they must first secure the signed score cards from J. P. Baker, signed and dated, and must make at least two rounds of play on the date of the cards, and hand them in signed by the opposing player. Mr. A. P. Burnham will give the prizes for June, Mr. J. P. Baker the prizes for July, and J. L. Wilcox the prizes for August. Tomorrow the qualifying round of play for the Valentine medal for ladies will begin and the qualifying round for the Wilson Lane trophy for men. The best sixteen in each will qualify. The third dance will be given at the clubhouse tomorrow evening after the regular club supper.

Dinner for Mrs. Pendleton. Mrs. James Fifield will entertain a company of twelve at a six o'clock dinner this evening. The guest of honor will be Mrs. F. R. Pendleton of Everett, Wash., who is visiting Mrs. James Fifield and Mrs. Frank E. Fifield.

Miss Bertha L. Tuttle Married. Janesville friends and relatives have received announcements of the marriage of Miss Bertha L. Tuttle of Cattagunas, N. Y., to Charles E. Kepple of Gowanda. The wedding occurred at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday evening and was one of the season's social events in Cattagunas. The bride is well known in this city having spent several weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Price, 1 Linn street. While here she sang in the Congregational church choir.

Rewards of Virtue. Every virtue gives its equal degree of felicity in some kind: honesty gives a good report; justice, estimation; prudence, respect; courtesy and liberality, affection; temperance gives health; fortitude a quiet mind, not to be moved by any adversity.—Walsingham.

TOWN OFFICER AND PROMINENT CITIZEN

G. D. Hall Died Last Evening and After Long and Useful Career in Johnstown Center.

From the debilities of old age, which have confined him to his home in Johnstown Center during the greater part of the past spring and winter, G. D. Hall passed away at half-past eleven o'clock last night. Mr. Hall was born in Monroe county, New York, August 7, 1835, and came to Rock county, Wisconsin, at the age of seven. Since then he has resided in the town of Johnstown and to that community his life has been useful and inspiring. He served many terms as supervisor, town chairman and assessor and for a number of years was president of the town insurance company. Educational matters always engrossed his attention and he did much for the betterment of the Johnstown schools. Not only as public servant but as a man he was very highly respected. On November 10, 1859, he married, his bride being Miss Ann Eliza Austin. Six children were born to them and five are left with the widow to mourn his demise. They are Mrs. Mary Morse of this city, Mrs. Cora Dickerson of Darien, V. S. Hall, O. B. Hall and W. J. Hall of Johnstown Center. Three sisters are also left—Mrs. Bear of Maple Park, Ill., Mrs. Estabrook of DeKalb, Ill., and Mrs. Wilder of Evansville, Wis. The funeral will be held from the home in Johnstown Center at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

INHERITANCE OF THE DOG.

Some Breeds Are Born With Strong Friendship for Man.

By the environment of his forbears for generations back you may know the dog. An Eskimo or sledge dog or a Chinese chow chow could never create the deep friendship that a deerhound or an English sheep dog or collie or a bulldog or a terrier is capable of inspiring.

Years before any of us were thought of the sledge dog was a beast of burden, tolerated because human lives depended on his "motor" power, begrudged the necessary wherewithal to keep his "machinery" in good order and treated not as a companion but as a pariah and as a brute without feeling, without thought, without hope.

How expect a descendant of these half starved, cuffed and buffeted animals not to shrink from the uplifted hand and treat with suspicion all friendly overtures? All man has done for him and his forbears has been to play the brute and make life a weary bondage.

And in all parts of the globe where the struggle for life is most desperate and people, according to our estimate, are brutes or semi or whole savages, so are the dogs of that people.

Persian wolfhounds, chow chows, "dingoes" in the wilds of Australia, Tibet mastiffs, all more or less dread man, who many years ago beat them into subjection, not affection.

THE ROUNDUP COLUMN.

Rube Waddell Tells the Wise Guys How to Qualify For Baseball.

[Special dispatch to our sporting department direct from headquarters—prepaid.] Pitcher Rube Waddell of the Philadelphia Americans had a brain storm during a recent game. It was distinctly Waddellesque and full of hot tips on the game of baseball. Here are the best of his thoughts, gathered from the storm:

By RUBE WADDELL.

[Copyrighted—Any one infringing must eat the fringe.]

If you want to fool a batter, throw him a ball he can't hit. Only pitch on days you are sure you will win. Never allow your work to interfere with good fishing.

RUBE'S IDEA OF A PITCHER'S CHIEF DUTY.

The way to win games is to get the most runs.

Stealing a base isn't grand larceny.

If you want to lead the league in batting, all you've got to do is to make a hit every time you come to the bat.

To insure safe hits always place the ball where a fielder "ain't."

A ball you don't touch ain't going in your error column, so stand still and watch it skim over the daisies.

It's no crime to kill an umpire—on your home grounds.

To get a high salary never work for low pay.

If you don't like the manager, resign and form a league of your own.

Pity the poor pitcher. Sometimes he has to work as often as three days in one week.

Fred Clarke of the Pittsburgh team and Burney Dreyfuss started out for an automobile spin on a recent day. Fred is a great motor car fancier, and in the off season he thinks nothing of taking a 200 or 300-mile spin through Kansas, in which state the popular outfielder lives.

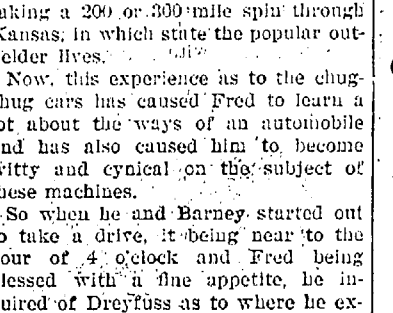

Now, this experience as to the chug-chug cars has caused Fred to learn a lot about the ways of an automobile and has also caused him to become witty and cynical on the subject of these machines.

So when he and Burney started out to take a drive, it being near to the hour of 4 o'clock and Fred being blessed with a fine appetite, he inquired of Dreyfuss as to where he expected to take supper.

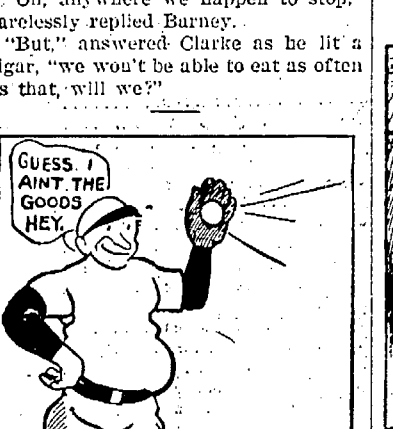

"Oh, anywhere we happen to stop," carelessly replied Burney.

"But," answered Clarke as he lit a cigar, "we won't be able to eat as often as that, will we?"

FIRST REAL STEP FOR GOOD ROADS

PLAN TO MAKE GENERAL BEGINNING IN COUNTY SYSTEM.

HAVE PETITIONED UNCLE SAM

To Help Build the Rock County Experimental Roads—Waiting for Word from Washington.

Uncle Sam may help the Rock county supervisors build the first of the system of good roads that is hoped will soon cover the county.

(This was the decision reached at the meeting with Samuel C. Lancaster, consulting engineer of the office of public roads, Washington, last Saturday. Mr. Lancaster on Friday and Saturday inspected almost the entire county in an automobile so that his talk with the supervisors who will have charge of the construction work of the new roads was of vital interest, as he was conversant with the existing circumstances.)

That the good roads movement has taken hold of Rock county was evidenced by the manner in which Mr. Lancaster was greeted at his talk at the courthouse. It was decided at this meeting that a committee of eight consisting of S. S. Jones of Clinton, P. P. Smiley of the town of Plymouth, W. O. Howell of the town of Center, John Sherman of the town of Fulton, John Barless of the town of Harmony, J. R. Jones of the town of Beloit, W. C. Duffy of the town of Bradford and J. A. Paul of the town of Milton be constituted into a special committee to take charge of the work.

It was also decided that the United States be asked if they would furnish a competent engineer to take charge of the work and a steam roller to aid in its completion.

Mr. Lancaster was asked to find if this could be done, and immediately telegraphed to the Department of Agriculture at Washington for information on the subject. Uncle Sam builds roads of its own, and has engineers and steam rollers for this work and it is possible that Rock county may be able to secure such aid. Mr. Lancaster thought it possible.

Mr. Horchiss of Madison, who is connected with the state geological survey and interested in the good roads movement, was present and stated that he might be able to secure the lease of a steam roller for the work from the state if Uncle Sam could not furnish it. He also told the meeting of the present law and its requirements and of the aid to the road-building measure that was now before the legislature which might be available for aid in Rock county.

The question of material was also discussed, the manner in which it was to be laid to secure the best result and the methods followed by expert road-builders. Mr. Lancaster is thoroughly conversant with the subject he talked on and his information was of much value. A competent engineer will be secured to take charge of the work already laid out in the county and the law closely followed. Good roads have really taken form at last.

MORE VICTIMS OF THE DOG POISONER

David Young's Little Fox Terrier Gained Strychnine Tinctured Bone in Fourth Ward Park.

"Skipper," the intelligent and handsome little fox terrier owned by Manager David Young of the Grand hotel, died of strychnine poisoning late last evening. Shortly after sunset Mr. and Mrs. Young took a stroll to the Fourth ward park. The dog was at their heels all the time but strayed away a little distance and brought back a bone while they were seated on a bench in the park. Upon their return to the hotel the little animal drank a large quantity of water and not long thereafter ran blindly against the wall of the room and fell limply to the floor. Realizing that something was wrong and suspecting poison, Mr. Young and James Buchanan forced hot lead down its throat. Afterwards the owner walked out into the night with the little animal, coaxing it to run a long distance. It appeared to be better after this but upon its return to the hotel suddenly stretched out on the floor and after a few brief struggles, died. The burial took place in the dooryard this morning. H. E. McCoy, a traveling man from Chicago, acting as the sexton.

A full-blooded Irish terrier owned by Louis Hemmings was poisoned in a similar manner last week. The poor brute lived two days, during which time every effort was made to save its life, but in the end died in terrible agony.

Only well-bred canines, harmless and well kept by their owners, have fallen victims to the jaws of the depraved wretch who is making this sort of persecution a hobby. The worthless street curs are evidently too wise for him.

HARD TO GET JURY FOR RUSSELL TRIAL

Candidates For the Bench Quite Generally Acknowledge Deep-seated Prejudices.

After the jurors drawn this morning for the second trial of the State vs. Alex. P. Russell assant and battery case, were examined it was found necessary to issue a special venire as several of those who were called acknowledged deep-seated prejudices requiring considerable evidence to overcome. C. S. Sayles and Charles Heddles were among those so handicapped and they were excused shortly after three o'clock. In spite of the sweltering atmosphere of the court room a large patient gallery was on hand to hear anything new which might be offered. It is understood that the prosecution will have some new witnesses.

WHEN BUTTE NEWSPAPERS STOPPED

STRANGE COMPLICATIONS THAT ENSUED WHILE A CITY OF 90,000 WAS WITHOUT NEWS.

Governmental Machinery Put Out of Business—Week After Week Stores Remained Almost Empty—Even Interest in Baseball Could Not Be Maintained—Theaters Lost Thousands—One Store Laid Off 50 Per Cent of Its Clerks—Wild Rumors and Absence of Advertising Seriously Hurt Business.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY C. B. ETHERINGTON.

By LOUIS M. THAYER.

UNTIL labor difficulties shut down the daily press of Butte, Mont., Feb. 13 last, the publishers of newspapers and their patrons, the advertisers, had had no opportunity to ascertain exactly what is the value of advertising. It is probable that there is not in modern American journalism, as instance as striking as that in Butte; where for thirty-nine days following Feb. 13, no daily papers were printed. The difficulty—a question of wage scales, in which printers, pressmen and stereotypers were involved—developed into a stubbornly fought strike, ending in a compromise. These details may be found in the history of union labor. But advertisers and publishers may never again enjoy the opportunity to study the relations of commerce and the daily press, under the circumstances existing during the press shutdown in Butte, for except in time of war or after a great disaster, no American city had had a similar experience or is likely to have. Butte is like no other community in the world, and so closely interwoven are the interests and propaganda of all union crafts that conditions in Butte scarcely could be duplicated elsewhere, and hence it is improbable that a newspaper shutdown of such duration will occur again.

While a city of only 90,000 people, Butte enjoys four daily papers, of it daily, advertising therein the filing of nominations, the notices of primaries and conventions for all parties. To this temporary paper came also the United States government in its stress. Many sorts of legal federal notices must appear during a certain period. Notification of patents of several sorts, locations of mining claims, notices that other sorts of land has been taken out, must be advertised. Without a newspaper city, county, state and federal governments had visions of legal difficulties that might continue in the courts for years.

Moreover, the usual legal notices of private corporations must, under the Montana law, appear in a newspaper during a certain period before the annual meeting of the corporation. If otherwise, any stockholder may contest the election of directors. For the first time the public, as a whole, stockholders and directors of corporations, public officials, state and federal, and political parties of every hue, began to see what part the newspaper plays and how indispensable it has become to modern American society.

But if banks, mining companies and other corporations, if political parties and public officials, became almost immediately impressed with the importance of the press, their plight was nothing compared to the actual loss suffered by merchants of every sort, not a few of whom had carried full house have no time for extended survey. They rely upon the newspapers to set before them the facts about the goods they desire and the prices fixed upon them.

If there was any doubt of these truths in the minds of the merchants of Butte before the shutdown, that doubt has been dispelled. Since resumption, although it came only a day before Easter, the press of Butte has carried 50 per cent more advertising than last year and 75 per cent more than a year before that, at this time. The suspension woke up the man who has something to sell.

Many Clerks Laid Off.

One leading department store laid off 50 per cent of its clerks. The president of another department store corporation acknowledged that the newspaper suspension had cost him from 60 to 75 per cent of his business and that through inability to lay before the women of the city the facts about his Easter stock he had disposed of only a small portion of an unusually large and attractive display.

But others besides department stores, milliners, haberdashers, clothiers and the middlemen generally were appalled while no newspapers were being issued of the value of the press. The Northwest Baseball league includes Butte, and as usual in February the city had been agog about the ball team for the coming spring. But without newspapers it is impossible to arouse or sustain interest in baseball. Half the pleasure of the fan comes in reading about the game after he has seen it. Moreover, he wants gossip about the team, about other teams. He likes to read the standing of teams and players, not only in his own league but in all the big leagues. If he loses track of the game, he is willing to drop out for the season. The owners of the Butte baseball club knew this well, and they frankly declared that should the newspapers not resume they would drop their franchise and withdraw their team.

Still another example. A leading real estate dealer, engaged in exploiting a suburb, had announced only a few days before the newspapers ceased to issue a contest in which prizes in money and land were to be given to those forming the greatest number of words from the letters composing the firm name. The contest was to have been chronicled in all the daily papers and the results were to be announced. Without the newspapers the public speedily forgot the contest entirely, and, whereas it started off brilliantly, at the close few completed. What with suitable advertising might have proved a big thing, both in exploiting the suburb and in placing the real estate firm more prominently before the people, failed absolutely without newspaper advertising.

The theaters also suffered heavily. It was almost impossible to bill the town, and never was billboard advertising less effective, never its influence on newspaper advertising more clearly demonstrated. First class attractions played to vacant chairs. People asked indifferently what was at the theaters. As in baseball, the theater goer wants to know who the players are and something of the play. He regards the billboards with suspicion, knowing that too often the information they convey is misleading or unreliable. It is not too much to state that lack of newspaper advertising cost the theaters of Butte and the traveling companies many thousands of dollars, the loss of the theaters being their entire profit for the season.

The Public Would Not Buy Stocks

The examples are endless. Sales in the local stock exchanges almost ceased. Without information on the state of the market in Europe and in the principal American centers, without information on which to base estimates of stocks, bonds, etc., the investing public would not buy. The brokers in vain endeavored to supply the place of newspapers by profuse daily bulletins and "tips." The public knew better. It did not want the financial interests to inform it. It wanted to read all the news bearing on the market and judge for itself.

On the contrary, the flood of wild rumors that filled the streets immediately after the newspaper suspension had a depressing effect upon the local exchanges and on business in general. The solvency of this or that company, the value of this or that stock, immediately began to be questioned. And since no community wants for malicious tongues, dangerous stories were circulated. It was bruited about that the leading grocer of the state had failed for hundreds of thousands of dollars. The owner of the largest department store in the northwest was said to be curtailing his business, and his solvency was doubted. As a matter of fact, this merchant was laying off clerks by the score, because the absence of advertising had left his shelves empty. Formerly he carried from four to eight pages per day.

Rumor declared that a former mayor had killed himself. Rumor killed a prominent brewer, who was obliged to hasten home from a winter resort to convince his friends of his being alive. Rumor divorced a dozen couples and started unfortunate stories the newspapers afterward were obliged to deny. Rumor, in short, proved conclusively the service which newspapers perform in keeping the people informed of the truth.

The duration of the suspension of the newspapers of Butte, the circumstances surrounding that suspension and the results it presented are well worth the study of not only every newspaper publisher, but of every newspaper advertiser in the United States, and if any of the latter doubt that money spent upon newspaper advertising is well spent they have only to write to any leading business man of Butte and ask for the facts.

DOUMA DISSOLVED; RUSSIANS TRANQUIL

WORKMEN OF ST. PETERSBURG MAY ENGAGE IN RIOTING.

GOVERNMENT CONFIDENT

Capital Well Protected by Troops—Nine of the Indicted Deputies Are Arrested.

St. Petersburg, June 17.—An imperial ukase was issued Sunday proroguing the council of the empire until November 13.

The dissolution of the second duma Saturday night was received throughout St. Petersburg with perfect tranquility; thanks to the precautionary measures, and in no place in Russia, so far as is known, were there any serious disturbances.

Demonstrations among St. Petersburg workmen are anticipated Monday, but the authorities are not alarmed. They profess to be chiefly apprehensive over the possibility of rioting and racial excesses in Odessa and Kiev and other cities where party feeling runs high. An outbreak of agrarian disorders in several regions of the empire is anticipated later, when the peasantry learn of the dissolution, but a spirit of quiet confidence in the ability of the government to handle the situation prevails in administrative circles.

Show Contempt for Manifesto.
News of the dissolution reached the St. Petersburg papers too late for their last editions, but the public was quickly informed through extras and great posters sent out by the police at all street corners, containing the ukase announcing the dissolution, and the imperial manifesto.

Little knots of readers clustered around these the whole day, attentively perusing the manifesto, the phrasing of which was calculated to appeal to the patriotism of the lower classes. Little enthusiasm or excitement, however, was evoked, and many of the readers, as they turned away, spat silently upon the ground as a sign of their deepest contempt.

City Is Well Guarded.

Though Gen. Drachevsky, prefect of police, was nominally in charge, the provisions for public safety were virtually in the hands of Gen. Hazenkampf, the aide to Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievitch, who returned from Krasnoye Selo to assume command of the combined garrison, including the guard corps, the Thirty-seventh infantry division, a large force of cavalry and Cossacks and several machine gun detachments. The military was chiefly disposed in the industrial section, but a strong force occupied the Tauride palace vicinity.

Nobody, not even judicial officials, was allowed to enter the precincts of the palace. A laconic notice was posted on the gates announcing that "former deputies" would receive their salaries upon application to the chancellery of the empire.

Nine Deputies Arrested.

During the night, nine of the 16 social democratic leaders, specifically named in the government indictment, including Prince Tseretkoff and M. Dzharapidge, were taken into custody. The seven others succeeded in eluding the elaborate provisions made for their arrest. Two secret service officers, with signed warrants had been assigned to follow each deputy and serve the warrants as soon as the ukase was promulgated. They were instructed to follow their men to the frontier if necessary, but the deputies succeeded in making their escape. Among those who have not yet been arrested are M. Ozel and M. Alexinsky, who have not returned to Russia.

Fine Piece of Gerrymandering.

The new election law is regarded as a masterly piece of gerrymandering, avowedly designed to reduce to a minimum the representation on the register of those classes of the population in which hostility to the government has been chiefly evident.

As a result of various changes the new duma will number 42 instead of 524. Of 24 towns formerly electing representatives, directly to the duma, only seven, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Warsaw, Kiev, Lodz, Odessa and Riga, retain their direct representation.

To increase the representation of the conservative land owners, the election of one land owner is made arbitrary. It is specifically provided that peasant deputies must be house owners, personally engaging in agriculture. The extension of the suffrage to the workmen, for which Witte was responsible, is practically nullified.

Prominent Baltimore Man Dead.

Baltimore, Md., June 17.—German H. Hunt, one of the most prominent citizens of Baltimore, died Sunday at Chautauque hotel, near this city. He was 78 years old. Mr. Hunt was one of the founders of the firm of Poole & Hunt, which during his connection with it became famous for the making of difficult and unusual machinery.

Two Women Burned to Death.

Savannah, Ga., June 17.—Mrs. Thomas Cook and her daughter, Miss Estelle Fountain, were burned to death Sunday in a fire that destroyed the home of N. A. Fountain, a son of Mrs. Cook. Mr. Fountain was injured by a fall from an upper story window, but probably will recover.

SACRED SCROLLS BURNED

ANCIENT JEWISH RITE IS OBSERVED IN NEW YORK.

For First Time in America, Damaged Parchments Are Interred with Much Solemnity.

New York, June 17.—Characterized with a solemnity that was as impressive as the services over the bier of a human being, 18 sacred parchments, symbolic of the Jewish faith, were buried in Washington cemetery Sunday.

These parchments were formerly the property of several synagogues in this city. Each contained the Pentateuch, or scroll of the Jewish law.

The Zichron Torahs Moses synagogue, where the services were held, was crowded. Four rabbis officiated, each explaining the sacred duty imposed on them by the rules of the Jewish religion, which specifically require that whenever scrolls are damaged or defective in any way they must be given a sacred burial. The scrolls were damaged in a recent fire. It is said that this is the first time that this ancient Jewish rite has been observed in America.

Much time and tedious effort were required in picking up the charred remnants of the parchments. After they had been collected they were carefully wrapped in white cloth and then heaped in a pile just in front of the altar of the Zichron Torahs Moses synagogue. For several days they remained on exhibition there, and were viewed by hundreds.

Mexico May Buy Warships.

Mexico, June 17.—Rumors are current here to the effect that the Mexican government is negotiating for two men-of-war transports and two battleships. One of these transports, it is said, will be built in English shipyards and one in New Orleans. Negotiations are said to be in progress with an European power for the purchase of two new warships, which were recently launched and can be delivered at once. A semi-official denial of the truth of the rumors has been made.

BRUCE VISITS GERONIMO.

British Ambassador Calls on the Famous Apache Warrior.

Lawton, Okla., June 17.—James Bryce, the British ambassador, spent Sunday partly here as the guest of the Chamber of Commerce, partly at Fort Sill, near here, where he visited both Geronimo, the famous Apache warrior, and Quanah Parker, chief of the Comanches.

At Sapulpa Mr. Bryce was presented with a copy of the Oklahoma constitution. When questioned later regarding the document, he said: "I have read a copy of the constitution but not an official copy. Judging from the copy I have read it is a very good elementary law."

"Would you consider the constitution as framed too much in the nature of a legislative measure?" he was asked.

"Too much can never be put into a constitution," tersely replied the visitor.

PRESIDENT WON'T INTERVENE.

Refers to Labor Commissioner Appeals Concerning Telegraphers' Strike.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 17.—President Roosevelt has referred to Charles P. Neill, commissioner of labor, without comment, the various appeals which have been made to him by wire and mail to interfere to prevent the threatened telegraphers' strike.

The position is taken that no emergency exists such as obtained at the time the president intervened in the anthracite coal strike, but on the contrary, the situation presented is one where action by the government, if taken at all, may properly be initiated and directed by the bureau of labor, of which Mr. Neill is the head.

Albert J. Beveridge, United States senator from Indiana, reached Oyster Bay Sunday, and is the house guest of Joseph Sears, who lives near Sagamore Hill. Mr. Beveridge has as yet no appointment to see the president.

MAIN STREET OF BUTTE, MONT.

standing. The Butte Miner, the Butte Inter Mountain, the Butte Evening News and the Anaconda Standard are the dailies, running from eight to thirty-two pages. The Evening News has a Scripps-McCrea telegraphic service; the remaining three take the Associated Press. The Anaconda Standard, while printed in Anaconda, twenty-six miles away, is for all intents and purposes a Butte newspaper.

The advertising carried by these four papers was unusually heavy. Wages are high in Butte, the payroll of the camp being greater than that of other cities with twice the population; hence retail business always is brisk and advertising profuse. Competition for the merchant's share of the great wage scale is keen, and in addition, as the mining district has been enjoying a boom, mining stocks and real estate contributed quotas to the average advertising. The Christmas editions preceding the shutdown were among the largest issued in the United States and at least one of the four dailies probably carried in display ads, and readers as much paid matter as any daily issued in the United States on that day. This boom, at its height in the holidays, was well sustained when labor troubles caused a suspension of all the newspapers.

Importance of the Press.

After the newspapers suspended a week passed without notable developments; then gradually the place of the newspaper began to make itself felt. It was discovered that candidates for office in the municipal elections could not qualify unless properly advertised. Furthermore, political conventions, under the state laws, could not legally sit without certain advertisement. In addition, the successful candidates could not take office because, under the statutes, their candidacy and the conventions that named them could not be legal without due advertisement in the press. It was a striking commentary on the importance of the press that the state laws should have provided that governmental machinery could not be set in motion unless the agency of the press were employed.

Appalled at the prospect of complications, the politicians of one party leased a small weekly paper and issued

The Art of Walking.

THE PRINCESS IN THE VELVET
By HAROLD MACGRATH
AUTHOR OF "THE PRINCE OF THE BOSS"
"HEARTS AND KISSES," ETC.

Suddenly I grow erect, every fiber in my body tense and expectant.

A voice, lifted in song! A great penetrating yet sickly mellow voice; a soprano; heavenly, not to say ghostly, coming as it did from the heart of this gloomy ruin of stone and iron. The jewel song from Faust, too! How the voice rose, fell, soared again with intoxicating waves of sound! What per-meating sweetness! I stood there, a solitary listener, as far as I knew, bewildered, my heart beating hard and fast. I forgot my hunger.

Had I stumbled upon one of my dreams at last? Had Romance suddenly relented, as a coquette sometimes relents? For a space I knew not what to do. Then, with a shrug—I have never been accused of lacking courage—I tried once more, by the aid of a match, to locate a bell. There was absolutely nothing; and the beating of my riding crop on the panels of that huge door would have been as noisy as a feather. I grasped the knob and turned it impatiently. Be-hold! the door opened without sound, and I stepped into the hallway, which was velvet black.

The wonderful voice went on. I paused, with hands outstretched. Supposing I bumped into something! I took a step forward, another and another; I swung my crop in a half circle; all was vacancy. I took another step, this time in the direction of the voice—and started back with a smothered curse. Bang-ang! I had run into a suit of old armor, the shield of which had clattered to the stone floor. As I have observed, I am not a coward, but I had all I could do to keep my legs—which were stirrup-weak, anyhow—from knocking under me!

Silence! The song died. All over that great rambling structure not even the reassuring chirp of a cricket! I stood perfectly still. What the deuce should I do? Turn back? As I formed this question in my mind a draft of wind slammed the door shut. I was in for it, sure enough; I was positive, that I could never find that door again. There was nothing to do but wait, and wait with straining ears. Here were mysterious inhabitants—they might be revolutionists, conspirators, counter-felers.

Heaven knows how long I waited. Soon I heard a laugh, light, infectious, fearless! Then I heard a voice, soft and pleading: "Don't go; in mercy's name, don't go, Gretchen! You may be killed!" English! I had actually heard a voice speak my native tongue.

"Nonsense, Betty! I am not afraid of any ghost that ever walked, rode or floated."

"Or Stelnbeck! We shall find nothing."

Indeed! "Nothing but a rat hugging about in the armor." The laughter came again. "You are not afraid, Betty?"

"Only cautious. But how can you laugh? A rat?" cried a voice rather anxiously. "Why, they are as big as dogs!"

"But arant cowards."

So! one of these voices spoke English as its birthright; the other spoke with an accent, that is to say, by adoption. Into what had I fallen? Whether had my hunger brought me? I was soon to learn.

There came a faint thread of light on one side of the hall, such as may be likened to that which filters under a door-sill. Presently this was followed by the sound of jangling brass rings. A heavy velvet portiere—which I, being in darkness, had not discovered—slipped back. My glance, rather blinding, was first directed toward the flame of the candle. Then I lowered it—and surrendered for ever and for ever! I beheld two faces in profile, as it were, one side in darkness, the other tinted and glowing like ancient ivory. I honestly confess to you that in all my wanderings—and they have been frequent and many—I never saw such an enchanting picture or two more exquisite faces. One peered forth with hesitant bravery; the other—she who held the candle—with cold, tranquil inquiry.

All my fears, such as they were, left me instantly. Besides, I was not without a certain amount of gallantry and humor. I stepped squarely into the light and bowed.

"Ladies, I am indeed not a ghost, but I promise you that I shall be if I am not offered something to eat at once!"

Tableau! "What are you doing here?" asked she with the candle, her midnight eyes drawing down her brows into a frown of displeasure.

I bowed. "To begin with, I find a gate unlocked, and being curious, I open it; then I find a door unlatched, and I enter. Under these unusual circumstances I am forced to ask the same question of you: what are you doing here in this ruined castle? If it isn't ruined, it is deserted, which amounts to the same thing. This was impertinent, especially on the part of a self-invited guest."

"That is my affair, sir. I have a right here, now and at all times." Her voice was cold and authoritative. "There is an inn six miles farther down the road; this is a private residence. Certainly you can not remain here, over night."

"Six miles?" I echoed dismally. "Madam, I have seemed impertinent, pardon me. I have been in the saddle six hours. I have ridden nearly 30 miles since noon. I am dead with fatigue. At least give me time to rest a bit before taking up the way again. I admit that the manner of my entrance was informal, but how was I to know? There was not even a knocker on the door by which to make known my presence to you."

The truth is, I did not want to go at once. No one likes to stumble into an adventure—enchanting as this promised to be—and immediately pop out of it. An idea came to me, serviceable rather than brilliant. "I am an American. My German is poor. I speak no French. I have lost my way, it would seem; I am hungry and tired. To ride six miles farther now is a physical impossibility; and I am very fond of my horse."

"He says he is hungry, Gretchen," said the English girl, dropping easily into the French language as a vehicle of speech. (I was a wretch, I know, but I simply could not help telling that lie; I didn't want to go; and they might be conspirators.) "Besides," went on the girl, "he looks like a gentleman."

"We can not allow a tell a gentleman in the candle-light," replied Gretchen, eyeing me critically and shrewdly and suspiciously.

As for me, I gazed from one to the other, inquiringly, after the manner of one who hears a tongue not understandable.

"He's rather nice," was the English girl's comment, "and his eyes strike me as being too steady to be dishonest."

I had the decency to burn in the ears. I had taken the step, so now I could not draw back. I sincerely hoped that they would not exchange any embarrassing confidences. When alone women converse upon many peculiar topics; and conversing in a tongue which they supposed to be unknown to me, these two were virtually alone.

"But, my dear child," the other returned argumentatively, "we can not offer hospitality to a strange man this night of all nights. Think of what is to be accomplished."

(So something was to be accomplished? I was right, then, in deceiving them. To accomplish something on a night like this, far from habitation, had all the air of a conspiracy.)

"Feed him and his horse, and I'll undertake to get rid of him before that detestable Stelnbeck comes. Besides, he might prove a valuable witness in drawing up the papers."

(Papers?)

"I never thought of that. It will not do to trust Stelnbeck wholly," Gretchen turned her searching eyes once more upon me. I confess that I had some difficulty in steadying my own. There are some persons to whom one can not be successfully, one of them stood before me. But I rather fancy I passed through the ordeal with at least half a victory. "Will you go your way after an hour's rest?" she asked, speaking in the familiar tongue.

"I promise." It was easy to make this promise. I wasn't a diplomat for nothing. I knew how to hang on, to dodge under, to go about.

"Follow me," Gretchen commanded briefly.

(Who was she? What was going on?)

We passed through the gloomy salon. A damp, musty odor struck my sense of smell. I was positive that the castle was uninhabited, save for this night. Three candles burned on the mantel, giving to the gloom a mysterious, palpitating effect. The room beyond was the dining-room, richly paneled in wine-colored mahogany.

This was better; it was cheerful. A log crackled in the fireplace. There were plenty of candles. There was a piano, too. This belonged to the castle, a heavy tarpaulin covering lay heaped at one side. There was a mahogany sideboard that would have sent a collector of antiques into raptures, and a table upon which lay the remains of a fine supper. My mouth watered. I counted over the good things: roast pheasant, pink ham, a sea-food salad, asparagus, white bread and unsalted butter, an alcohol-burner over which hung a tea-pot, and besides all this there was a pint of La Rose which was but half-emptied. Have you ever been in the saddle half a day? If you have, you will readily appreciate the appetite that was warring with my curiosity.

"Dat," bade she, who was called Gretchen, shortly.

"And my horse?"

"Where is it?"

"Tied to a tree by the gate."

She struck a Chinese gong. From the kitchen appeared an elderly servant who looked to me more fitted to handle a saber than a carving knife; at least, the scar on his cheek impressed me with this idea. (I found out later that he was an old soldier, who lived alone in the castle as caretaker.)

"Take this gentleman's horse to the stables and feed him," said Gretchen. "You will find the animal by the gate."

With a questioning glance at me the old fellow bowed and made off.

I sat down, and the two women brought the various plates and placed them within reach. Their beautiful hands flashed before my eyes and now and then a sleeve brushed my shoulder.

"Thank you," I murmured. "I will eat first, and then make my apologies."

This remark caught the fancy of Gretchen. She laughed. It was the same laughter I had heard while standing in the great hall.

"Will you drink tea, or would you prefer to finish this Bordeaux?" she asked pleasantly.

"The wine, if you please, otherwise the effect of the meal and the long hours in the wind will produce sleepiness. And it would be frightfully discourteous on my part to fall asleep in my chair. I am very hard to awake."

The English girl poured out the wine and passed the goblet to me. I touched my lips to the glass, and bent my head politely. Then I resolutely proceeded to attack the pheasant and ham. At least, I must prove to these women that I am a man. I was honest in regard to my hunger. I succeeded in causing a formidable portion of the food to disappear.

And then I noticed that neither of the young women seated herself while I ate. I understood. There was no hostility in this action; nothing but formality. They declined to sit in the presence of an unwelcome stranger, thus denying his equality from a social point of view. I readily accepted this decision on their part. They didn't know who I was. They stood together by the fireplace and carried on a conversation in low tones.

How shall I describe them? The elder of the two, the one who seemed to possess all the authority, could not have been more than 20. Her figure was rather matured, yet it was delicate. Her hair was tawny, her skin olive in shade and richly tinted at the cheekbones. Her eyes, half framed by thick, black-arching brows, reminded me of woodland pools in the dusk of the evening—depths unknown, cool, refreshing in repose. The chin was resolute, the mouth was large but shapely and brilliant, the nose possessed the delicate nostrils characteristic of all sensitive beings—that is to say, thoroughbred; altogether a confusing, bewildering beauty. At one moment I believed her to be Latin, at the next I was positive that she was Teutonic. I could not discover a single weak point, unless impulsiveness shall be called weakness; this sign of impulsiveness was visible in the lips.

The other—well, I couldn't help it. It was Kismet, fate, the turn in the road, what you will. I fell heels over head in love with her at once. She was charming, exquisite, one of those delicate creatures who always appear in enchantments: a Bouguereau child grown into womanhood, made to fit the protecting frame of a man's arms. Love steals into the heart when we least expect him; and before we are aware, the shy little girl has unpacked his trunk and taken possession.

Eyes she had as blue as the Aegean sea on windy days, blue as the cloud-windowed sky of a winter's twilight, blue as sapphires—Irish eyes! Her hair was as dark and silken as a plume from the wings of night. (Did I not say that I had some poetry in my system?) The shape of her mouth—Never mind: I can recall only the mad desire to kiss it. A graceful figure, a proud head, a slender hand, a foot so small that I wondered if it really poised, balanced or supported her young body. Tender she must be, and loving, emotional rather than erect like her authoritative companion. She was adorable.

All this inventory of feminine charms was taken by furtive glances, sometimes caught—or were they taking an inventory of myself? Presently my appetite became singularly submissive. Hunger often is satisfied by the feeding of the eyes. I dropped my napkin on the table and pushed back my chair. My hostesses ceased conversing.

A French Joke.

Here is a French joke that is rather English in character. The marquis de Pavieres, notorious for his impetuosity, called on a man of means named Barnard and said: "Monsieur, I am going to astonish you. I am Marquis de Pavieres. I do not know you, and I come to borrow 500 louis."

"Monsieur," Barnard replied, "I am going to astonish you much more. I know you and I am going to lend them."
